[FOREWORD]

Issues to Consider As We Begin the Year 2001

Ikuo Koike, President

We have ushered in the 21st century, and as we stand at the beginning of a new age, JACET faces new challenges and opportunities for growth.

At the end of the last century, we had the privilege to host AILA '99 from August 1-6. Significant progress was made at the subsequent Asian Conference on Language Education Policy. I am extremely honored to have been able to coordinate these conventions, and am grateful for the dedication and long hours of effort of all who organized and participated. This includes time-consuming post-conference discussions and activities which resulted in the arduous task of compiling a congress report and the publication of a CD-ROM and a special volume entitled "Selected Papers from AILA '99 Tokyo".

AILA provided us with an opportunity to reach out to the world, and have the world come to Japan. The deliberations and international exchange which took place at the convention will benefit educators and scholars in Japan and nations throughout the world.

As we face a new millenium, Japan is seeing a decline in its university-age population. Many universities and colleges face the danger of downsizing or closing down. One of JACET's roles is to debate possible measures to avert as many of these closures as possible. JACET is now conducting a nation-wide survey of universities, and is analyzing pedagogical systems and working to ascertain the present situation. The first stage of the analysis has ended, and we are now launching a new study on individual educators and researchers. We ask for your cooperation in completing the survey, so that JACET can obtain an accurate picture of the status quo, and propose and implement measures to improve English education and foreign language education in Japan.

Various pending issues need to be addressed. One crucial issue is improving the aptitude of English teachers at all stages of the education spectrum, and motivating languid students. Japan is at a critical stage of development. It needs to educate students who will be able to freely use language as a means by which they function at the global level. The status of English education is still unclear at the elementary level. At middle schools and high schools, students are now required to learn fewer English terms, and the size of textbooks is being reduced. Such measures stifle opportunities to educate potential international players.

Another disturbing move is the disbanding of liberal arts departments at many universities, resulting in the dispersal of English teachers throughout various other departments.

As universities and colleges meet with financial pressure, foreign language teachers face the possibility of losing their jobs, and being replaced by part-time teachers. We need to re-consider the basic principles of foreign language education, and clarify what needs to be done. JACET needs to meet the needs of its members, and address the issues at hand.

JACET must restructure and adapt to the needs of the new century. I hope that all JACET members will participate in the long and laborious, yet promising path before us.

Report from the JACET Office
Hiromi Kobayashi, Secretary General

JACET activities from April, 2000 to March, 2001

【Chugoku/Shikoku Chapter Report】

The Annual Chapter Convention was held on June 4

2000 at Shikoku University. Special features of the conference were, first, a workshop by Professor Junsaku Nakamura on "How to use on-line Corpus Data Base" and, second, a workshop/symposium by Takeshi Tamai and Kaoru Iseno on "Usefulness of Action Research." Participants benefited greatly from the workshops.

Two Lecture Meetings were held in the year 2000. One was by a Pakistani Canadian, Salman Amjad, on "Anti-bias Education and Cooperative Learning," which was held at Hiroshima Kokusai Gakuin University on July 1. The other was given by the renowned Takao Suzuki, whose talk was entitled: "Let us aim at International English which is free from particular nationality or culture." He presented the lecture at Matsuyama University on January 9, 2001.

The Lodge and Study Gathering of the year was held on the coast of Seto Inland Sea in Uno. Two senior members of the chapter, Hiroji Nakamura and Akio Notohara gave lectures. Professor Nakamura talked about the "Future English Education in university" and participants benefited greatly from experience drawn from Professor Notohara's 50-years in English education.

【Kyushu/Okinawa Chapter Report】

As host of the annual nationwide conference, the millennium year was one of the busiest years in memory for the Kyushu-Okinawa Chapter. Preparations for the conference began early in the year and continued until the day before the conference. In keeping with a strong interest in English education in East Asia in Kyushu, a number of distinguished scholars from Korea, Singapore, and Taiwan were invited to participate in the conference, which ended with a fruitful symposium on various issues in English education in Japan, Korea, Singapore, and Taiwan. As the sponsor of the nationwide conference, the Chapter did not hold an annual conference in 2000; the annual conference will resume again in the fall of 2001.

Ties with Asia were also strengthened by the Chapter's local activities. In May, the Chapter, in cooperation with Kyushu-Okinawa Chapter of The Japan Association for the Study of Teaching English to Children (JASTEC), invited Dr. Park Mae-ran of Pukyong University (Pusan), as a guest lecturer. Dr. Park discussed various aspects of elementary school English education in Korea in a lecturer entitled "Teaching English in Elementary Schools in Korea." The lecture was an excellent opportunity for Chapter members and others to learn first-hand about recent developments in South Korea.

The Chapter also strengthened the editorial procedures over the annual journal last year. The number of blind reviewers increased over previous years, thus insuring that every paper could be read by at least two reviewers. The new procedures resulted in a significant improvement in the quality of the journal.

Relations with the Yongnam English Teachers Association (YETA), which is composed of teachers and researchers in the Southeastern region of the Republic of Korea, continued to strengthen. In June, Professor Suzuki Chizuko of Nagasaki Junshin Catholic University was invited as a guest lecturer at YETA's spring conference and in October, Dr. Robert J. Fouser of Kagoshima University was invited as a guest lecturer at the fall conference. The Chapter invited Dr. Lee Hyo-woong of Korea Maritime University (Pusan) and president of YETA as the keynote speaker at the nationwide conference in November. Relations have also been strengthened over the past year by the publication of articles by Chapter members in YETA's journal and by YETA members in the Chapter's journal.

Taken together, successful completion of the nationwide conference, strengthening of relations with YETA and other Asian scholars, and improvements in the quality of the annual journal made for a productive year that laid the groundwork for continued success in 2001. Reports on the activities of the Chapter's three special interest groups--English Education in East Asia, ESP: English for Special Purposes, and English and Computers--will be presented in the next issue of the Newsletter.

Reports from Special Interest Groups (SIGS)

[Chugoku-Shikoku]

<College English Education in Asia>

The group published its fourth volume of collected papers in April after a year's absence. This latest volume has two papers on India: "An observation of Indian English, particularly English spoken by Tamil," by Jiro Numano and the "Role of English in India and the relationship between English and Indian culture," by Fumiko Kondo, both from Hiroshima Kokusai Gakuin. The papers strongly suggest a new way of looking at English spoken in outer circle (in D. Crystal's term). Another paper is "A report of Training English teachers in China" by Yayoi Akagi and Marilyn Higgins. The group now represented by Professor Ikadatsu plans to publish its fifth volume.

Other Reports

Committee Reports:

The General Survey Committee

Akira Mikami

Toyo Women's College

JACET conducted nationwide surveys 20 years ago and published 5 volume reports in 10 years. The surveys were informative and greatly contributed to the reform of English education in Japan. These studies, however, are outdated after reforms at many universities and colleges in Japan. JACET has decided that new surveys need to be conducted quickly.

The objectives of the surveys are:

1. To ascertain the current state of language education in Japan.
2. To consider the significance of language education in Japan.
3. To assess language teachers.
4. To consolidate the opinion of language teachers on language education.
5. To determine if gaps exist between what society needs and what language teachers offer.

Presentation:

Networked English Language Education at Waseda University

Michiko Nakano

Waseda University

Waseda University has been running cross-cultural distance language learning, cyber lectures and online-English Tutorials since 1999. This is a report concerning the nature of this networked English Language Learning.

The Cross-Cultural Distance Learning (CCDL)

project at Waseda recruited teachers from several universities from various locations throughout the world: Korea University (Korea), Kangwon National University (Korea), De La Salle University (the Philippines), University of Malaya (Malaysia), University of Chulalongkorn (Thailand), Thammasat University (Thailand), National University of Singapore (Singapore), RELC (Singapore), Capital Normal University (China), Essex University (U.K.) and National Taiwan Normal University (Taiwan). University of Edinburgh (U.K.), University of Hawaii at Hiro (U.S.A.) and University of Brunei (Brunei) are going to join us in 2001. During the presentation, the tasks assigned to the students were explained and some analysis of data was touched upon. For detail, please visit our Home Page: <http://www.project.mnc.waseda.ac.jp/ccdl/>

Next, I introduced five cyber courses offered at Waseda in 2000. Dr Alan Davies at Edinburgh gave us 8 lectures on “Current Issues of Applied Linguistics” and Dr Hugh Trappes-Lomax also gave us 8 lectures on Sociolinguistics. Dr Ian Neary at Essex offered us 5 lectures on “Human Rights and Japanese Values.” Dr Mike Long, Dr Dick Schmidt, and Dr Cathy Doughty gave us a series of lectures on Second Language Acquisition in relation to recent research findings on Critical Period. Dr Jack Richards and Dr Bells at RELC also gave us lectures on Methodological issues. Korea University also offered 10 research reports by those who recently finished their Ph.D’s in America. These cyber lectures were announced to JACET members who were requested to share helpful lectures. We have uploaded handouts on our Home page: <http://pc171115.pc.waseda.ac.jp/ccdl/>

Finally I talked about on-line English Tutorials which are based on the Video-Conferencing System. In 2000, about 1000 Waseda students participated in this system. One tutor is assigned for every four students. Teachers conduct their English speaking lessons on line. The students were grouped according to SST test scores. The method of teaching was explained during my presentation.
