

Global Teaching Fellow Openings

(University Lecturer in Greater Tokyo Area)

Tokyo International University

Overview

Tokyo International University (TIU), located in the greater Tokyo area, is seeking qualified applicants to teach as Global Teaching Fellows in the Global Teaching Institute (GTI). The purpose of GTI is to bring Japanese and international undergraduate students in contact with a diverse English-speaking faculty that will engage them in practical English communication skills through a variety of language-learning and culture-related topics. Fellows teach a variety of courses including: 1st and 2nd year required skill-based classes, and English for academic-purposes (EAP).

Job Responsibilities

Job responsibilities include teaching 15 hours per week per semester spread across 5 days (9:10am to 6:00pm). Courses are assigned a standardized curriculum with required textbooks. Fellows are also expected to hold three 90-minute advising sessions per week in the English Plaza, develop curricula and materials, and attend departmental and coordinator meetings. Fellows also assist with student recruitment including TIU Open Campus sessions and high school visits throughout the year.

Compensation and Benefits

All appointments will be made for an initial two-year contract, renewable two times upon mutual agreement.

The remuneration package includes the following.

- Competitive Salary: 5,250,000 yen per year
- Generous benefits: health insurance (including dental and eye care), pension, commuting allowance, celebratory/condolatory allowances
- Research and professional development support: research funds (personal and group), shared office, individual work computer
- Assistance for international relocation: relocation stipend, housing support

About Tokyo International University

Tokyo International University was founded in 1965 with a focus on business and commerce, and upon earning accreditation from the Ministry of Education (MEXT) the college has grown into a private university that now encompasses five undergraduate schools and four graduate schools. In addition, TIU has been sister schools with Willamette University in Salem Oregon since the beginning, and has also developed deep relationships with other renowned universities across the globe.

Staying consistently true to its educational philosophy of "nurturing truly international-minded people," TIU is constantly expanding its practice-oriented international education. The University boasts a highly international learning environment: of TIU's approximately 6,500 students, roughly 1,200 are international students from over 60 countries around the world.
